

Nonongo Testing

Viktor Nonong Medrano

2020-10-13

Nonongo Reverie

In my afternoon reverie whilst in a Korean-Japanese restaurant, I have a thought experiment about combining Esperanto vocables with Japanese grammatical endings and particles. I call it Nonongo.

2020-10-14

Nonongo Test 01

Mia amiko ni, ĝibun no hundo ni fragoj o manĝaseru homo ga estimas.

I have a friend who feeds his dog strawberries. (Tatoeba)

Nonongo Test 02

Mi va sia hundo ni fragojn manĝaseru amiko ga estimas.

I have a friend who feeds his dog strawberries. (Tatoeba)

Kafe ni no Nihonjin

Kafe ni no Nihonjin wa "Miso ga...." to iimashita.

2020-10-15

Nonongo Test 03

Li va ĉiumatene sian hundon marŝasemas.

He walks his dog every morning. (Tatoeba)

Nonongo Test 04

Li va ĉiumatene sia hundo vo marŝasemas.

He walks his dog every morning. (Tatoeba)

Nonongo Test 05

Hundo va marŝemas.

The dog can walk.

Nonongo Reverie Again

Nonongo as yet does not have a solidified grammar. In reverie, I conjure up sentences, often from Japanese samples. Nonongo is still quite whimsical. Some features are still undecided. Hmmmm.

2020-10-16

Nonongo Test 06

Li va japana ga povimas.
He can speak Japanese.

Nonongo Test 07

Li va nazo ga longa estimas.
He has a long nose.

Nonongo Testing

There exist clashes in the vocabularies and grammars of Japanese and Esperanto, which comprises Nonongo. So it is up to taste really which way to go. Such is verily whimsical...